Expense Reporting as Easy as Time Entry

SCOTTSDALE—August 22, 2011—Omega announces the release of Inline Expense Reports, a new product enhancement that is set to launch this month and will be offered as part of the Omega Legal^{VX} software solution. Inline Expense Reports, with its user interface similar to Time Entry, makes the task of entering expense reports as simple as entering time in Omega Legal.

Inline Expense Reports streamlines the expense reporting process by improving the workflow between departments and shortening the time between submittal and when checks are cut, making timely reimbursement possible. Expense reports are submitted, approved and paid directly in the application, eliminating many of the problems associated with time-consuming and error-prone manual expense reporting systems. Users can quickly access expense information anytime—all expense reports for a timekeeper can be viewed from a single page within Inline Expense Reports. Email alerts keep users apprised of their expense report's status, from the initial submittal to the distribution of reimbursement checks.

Inline Expense Reports also provides visibility into where your firm's money is being spent. Overall expense spending can be analyzed at either the attorney or firm level, allowing your firm to gain more control on expenses and cut costs if needed.

"Here at Omega, we've been hard at work developing products that will help you manage day-to-day tasks more effectively," said Don Gall, President and Founder of Omega Legal Systems, Inc. "Inline Expense Reports is one of several new products designed to make your firm's workflow more efficient and productive."
